Title of Submission:	Future of policing
Comments:	Up train the garda reserves, give them the full training as the full time force, and let them work more closely within there local area. The model could be used from the specials in the UK. It frees up more of the full time force for other duties. The reserve force would work more hours and more people in the local community would want to join the reserves. It will take more time to train them but it will have more gardai available for duties. Once they are fully trained let them be intergrated to the different units within Gardai. i.e Garda Traffic Corps, Roads Policing Unit, Public Order Unit. This will strengthen the units and be more available for special ocassions when the units can't be at full strength. Community policing will be helped if there was a local person in the area as a reserve in the community police. This would benifit rural areas where there is no local police station. The local community would feel more safer and willing to call the Gards if there was one the local area.
